GERMANY'S NEW DEPARTURE.

The most startling event in European his tory since the outbreak of the French Revo lution a hundred years ago is the German legislation chronicled in THE EVENING WORLD to-day.

It is apparently the first step towards State Socialism, a step forced by the rising tide of poverty and discontent, and it can scarcely fail to be the beginning of a new era in European statesmanship.

The principal of paternal Socialism, once recognized by the strongest Government in Europe, will inevitably seek extension to its logical conclusion in absolute Communism, not in Germany only, but throughout the

What the result will be, or in what way true Democracy will ultimately triumph over both the old despotism of brute force and the new despotism of the paternal state, only history can say. But in this German legislation a great struggle of systems is begun. It marks a new epoch in statecraft.

AU ADJUSTABLE PATRIOT.

Political convictions have no shidingplace in the mind of a Treasury clerk named HAXTER. Parties may come and go, but he is girl.

They went to the island of Jersey and saw along the case. BARTER Blue time. When CLEVELAND assumed the Presidency, by documentary evidence Barter was able to prove that no one was a stancher Democrat than he, and he stayed at the public crib. No sooner does Harrison's regime begin than this adjustable patriot bobs up with testimonials of his unswerving loyalty to the G. O. P.

It is gratifying to know that his duplicity has been uncovered, and that in all probability there will soon be some way devised to run the Government without Barres's aid. This spivelling creature should be meontinently bounced. The very act of his trickery shows that he dare not rely on his record for efficiency for retention, and that should be the only test.

A SUGGESTIVE CONDITION.

We have it from such high authority as the probable Democratic number for Governor of Ohio, that the coming campaign in that State will not be saturated with "bordle," except in a certain contingency. But that contingency is not a very remote or nunstral one. It is this: " That no rich men shall go in for the United States Senstorship," and the manner in which that justy youngster and the manner in which that lusty youngster is glorified, is evidently having its effect in ARVERNE'S OFFERING dignifying babyhood. In deference to this reign of the "baby" one railroad company has already raised the embargo heretotore these rulers of households. All baby carriages accompanied by their owners are to be allowed free transportation.

This concession will cause much joy to the parents of the babies, and will add another laurel to the wreath that encircles the brow of Baby BEN. There can be no doubt that this order is attributable to the influence of His Toddling Highness.

MISS O'HALLORAN WAS ABDUCTED BY ARTIST GEORGE HITCHCOCK.

The story of Miss Agnes O'Halloran's abduction by Arcist Hitchcook in Paris and the bearing of the French laws on such cases furnishes food for reflection to all parents and guardians of beautiful young women contemplating a sojourn at the gay capual.

It will be remembered by THE EVENING World's readers that the announcement was made about four weeks ago that Miss O'Halloran and Hitchcock had cloped. Mr. O'Halloran and his eldest daughter, Mary. arrived in this city last week and proceeded at once to their home in St. Paul, Minn. The story given by Miss O'Halloran puts the elopement of Agnes with George Hitchsock in a new light. The girl gives the fol-owing account of the affair; June 17 the Misses O'Halloran returned to I arm after coing Italy, and began to prepare to go to America. As the Salon was to close soon, the e der steter, with a friend, Miss M.—, went to see the pic ures in the a ter-M—, went to see the pic ures in the a terroon, leaving Agnes writing letters a home.

When she finished her letters the young girl went herself to post them, dressed as she was in house attire. Coming back sits met

He spoke of a private collection which his wished her to see. The girl, after some hesitation on account of her costume, consouted, and Hirchcock helped her into a cab.

After it had gone some distance, Miss O'Halloran inquired where the galery was and where they were going. Hitchcock held her to Chantilly. Statiled by the announcement, the young woman asked to be taken back. Hitchcock refused and broke into a possionate declaration of love, to ing her would blow her brains out and then kill poss-ionate declaration of love, to ling her that he would possess her a ive or dead, for that if she made any outery or resisted he would blow her brains out and then kill himself.

ne told her furthermore that he had sent degrams to his wife and to Mas Mary O'isalloran, and had taken care to inform the correspondents of two American papers that she had cloped with him.

Overcome by the terrible meshes which she saw weven about her, and feeling perfectly helpless before the insane passion of Hitoncock, Miss O'Halloran tainted. In this condition she was taken to a hotel at Chan-tilly, every attempt of hers to move Hitch-cock being met by the same rejoinder—that he would have her, dead or a two.

Mrs. Hitchcock and Mary O'Halloran dis-covered that the missing pair were at the Chantilly Hotel and the latter hastened there at once.

Expostulations were useless. The artist Expositilations were usaless. The arist claim doggedly to his purpose. Miss Mary O'Halleran insisted that she must see her sis or and forcoil herself into the room. A pretty little resort by the sea is Arverne. It is about two miles this side of Far Rockaway. It has fifty or sixty cool and co-v cottages and a large and handsome hotel where transient boarders may enjoy the double delight of touching elbows with the ocean and of having an exquisite sense of envy of those who dwell in the trim cottages and exploit the ocean breezes the Summer round.

The beach is said to be the finest on the South shore. The sand is quite as white as the fishnel suits, the sunshine almost as brilliant as the "blazers." And the sunsets! They are often so fine that there is more than a suspicion that they have been contrived by the nanagers of the hotel.

On mellow moonlight nights, the children say, the mermaids off Arverns hold up their glasses to the moonbeams. But, fine as all things are at Arverne, with its unmistakable man who was twelve miles from a lemou. They think of the less fortunate children who sweater and die in the tall tenement-that Summer and all whose yachting and dalliance with the waves was confined to dr am on the roofs of the tenements.

So the four little maids of Arverne got up a little air. They made everything for it with their own hands, and they held the little fair is a little shed. Four or five families that had pitched their tents on the beach for the Summer patronized the little fair. They came to the fairs of they would say. We're easily surprised to see you. These little philanthropis's were trying their wings. This Summer the same four little girls, Miss Kit y Camp ell. Miss Sue Derickson, Miss Louise Campbell and Miss May Derickson pauned and her air. They wrote charming little children's letters to a great many very dignified and austere people, and thus they get gitts from Tutapy & Co., Howard & Co., Davis Collamore & Co., Haviland & Co., Harper & Bros., The tentury Company, Isadore Strauss, Peck & Enyder, Mitchell & Vance, Travis Brothers, Radley & Hubbard, Paillard & Co., The Whiting Paper Company, George Massey, Ladd & Coffin, Anglim Mazetti, McNaughton and Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer. Last Thursday was a great day at Arverne.

The fair was open! If excitemen could dis-turb the quiet of a summer resort, Arrerne would have been agitated from the centre all

And it was agitated—ab, wi'dly agitated!

The piano is stacked with dresses -of dimity, muslin, bombazine, cambric and calico for infants and runabouts, all nearly new. nicely laundered and so prettily made that in giving them away the baby gets a frock and the mother a pattern for innumerable dresses. This is by no means an insignificant item, for in the majority of cases the women have grown up without any knowledge whatever of keeping house or raising a family. It is not wholly their fault that they are cursed by ignorance. At the age of fourteen and less the girls are sent out to run checks in a store or roll eigarcttes in a factory. They remain at the work year after year slaving from 7 o'clock until 7 o'clock, many of them six days in the week, for the bare means of subsistence, and when at the age of maturity the young men in the shop offer to marry them they gladly accept, hoping that the change will better their condition. The day after the wedding they go on with their work to help procure the needed articles for the humblest flat, and no time is found for serving, cooking or the study of domestic science

Children are born, the factory work has to be abandoned, thus reducing the mcome, and the slender earnings of the young husbands scarcely pay the rent and grocery bills. Mother and children exist.

A work-tasket is something unknown, a spool of thread is rarely seen in the house, and, unable to sew, there is no use for a needle. Apything that will cover the pakedness of the child is reparded as a sufficiency.

For the first year the garment is as destitute of design as a table-cloth, and the tiny mortal is swaddled in a towel or a piece of sheeting quite as often as in a slip. The young children are put in shop dresses, bought at great inconvenience, and the parents' clothes are used as makeshifts by the large children.

Ignorance in caring for the children, in preparing food, keeping house and buying provisions, is even more lamentable, for in it s involved the ambition of the husband, the welfare of the ramily and the happiness of the

In less than the two weeks' work of THE EVENING WORLD's corps of free physicians the doctors have made a list of not less than 700 names of families in the very depths of misery and want-families in which the father is unemployed, the children sick and the mother insensible to everything but her need of food, drink and medicine.

One case is particularly pathetic. The father has a fractured ankle that will keep him from work for another month. The mother is in a delicate condition, her youngest child has whooping cough, the two eder have been very ill from cholera morbus and are not yet out of danger, and previous to this all were sick with scarlet fever and measies during the early Spring, and the medical attendance that saved their lives depleted the family purse. Now the home is cheerless and the cang is the deeper because pride-wrapped, and there are hundreds and hundreds of just such cases in the route of every physician in THE EVENING WORLD corps, to whom a kind-hearted mother or friend would seem a ministering angel sent

arian Swindler. ISPECIAL TO THE WORLD. CHICAGO, July 23.—The arrest of Nelson Driggs and his wife Gertrude by United States Secret Service officers at Dayton, O., and the finding in their possession of $25,000 in counterfeit money, recalls the career of "Daddy" Driggs in Illinois. In 1855 Driggs kept a country store in Southern Illinois, which was the headquarters for a gang of "Romackers." Driggs was sent to the cid Aiton prison for ten years, but received a pardon from the Governor in 1856. Driggs was then forty-eight years of age.

In 1870, when Elmer Washburn was at the years of age.

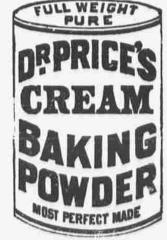

In 1870, when Elmer Washburn was at the head of the Secret bervice, he located a gang of counterfeiters on the Mississippi River, across from Lyons, Ia, and captured the whole gang. Ben Boyd was the engraver. Nelse Driggs, Gertrude Stadlfeit, Charles Stadltelt and William Long, alias Nick. Horn, were the shovers of the queer. The woman turned out to be old man Driggs's wife and was not prosecuted. Boyd got ten, Driggs fitteen, Long seven and Charley Stadlfeit two years in Joliet Prison, and all served their terms. Driggs was released Nov. 11, 1864.

The famous counterfeit five dollar bill on the Traders' National Bank of Chicago, the plate for which was engraved by Beu Boyd, was the queer 'that was handled by the gang. Driggs is nearly eighty years old, while his wife is a pretty looking young woman of thirty-five. The old man was reported to be worth $100,000 while he was confined at Joliet, and his wife spent many thousands of dollars in her fruitless endeavors to produre his release.

Their First Trouble with Employees.

IMPECIAL TO THE WORLD. EAST HAMPTON, Mass., July 22.-A general reduction of pay at the Williston Mills goes into effect to-day. The reduction ranges from 12 to 20 per cent. The spinners, when notified 12 to 20 per cent. The spinners, when notified of the reduction, refused to work, but an openair meeting was held, and it was decided to continue work, provided both mills of the Company were again run to their tui capacity. To this proposition the management consented, and promised to have the mills running in all departments within two weeks. A recent change in superintendents occurred, and Mr. Fails, thenew "super," at once began a reduction of expenses. Second-hands in all departments have been dispensed with and the overseers are now doing their own and the second-hands work at reduced pay. There is very general disastisfaction among employees, and a general strike is liable to occur at any moment. From two hupdred to three hundred persons are employed in the mills, the product of which is cotton yarms and twines. The market has been dull for some time past, and the mills are becoming overstocked with finished threads. It is nearly thirty years since the mills were started here, and this is the first labor trouble in their history.

Again the Chinese Actors. The Chinese theatrical company which recently played at the Windsor Theatre, in this city, has just signed new contracts with Thomas L. Lee, the Chinese Deputy Sheriff, for a two weeks sugagement at the same theatre, begin-ning to-night. Mr. Lee was urged to take this step by his countrymen, who guaranteed him a paying patronage.
